A new and dangerous five-dollar counterfeit United States Treasury note, series of 1875, check letter A, has recently been put in circulation. It is made by a photo lithographic process, and is a very close imitation. Business men and others should keep a sharp lookout for this counterfeit.

A SPECIAL despatch to the Courier-Journal from Albany states that there is a boom for Mr. Thurman, and it is positively asserted that the ex-Senator will be the next Secretary of the Interior. The same despatch assigns Senator Lamar to the Postoffice Department. The latter information, however, is not regarded as trustworthy.

M R. JEFFERSON in reply to a remonstrance used the following language: "When it is considered that during the late administration those who were not of a particular sect of politics were excluded from all office. When by a steady pursuit of this measure, nearly the whole offices of the United States were monopolized by that sect. When the public sentiment at length declared itself, and burst open the doors of honor and confidence to those whose opinions they approved, was it to be required that this monopoly of office was to be continued in the hand of the minority? Does it violate their equal rights to assert some rights in the majority also? Is it political intolerance to claim proportionate share in the direction of public affairs? If a due participation of office is a matter of rights, how are vacancies to be obtained? Those by death are few, by resignation none. Can any other mode than that of removal be proposed?" He says further: "In regard to appointments to civil offices by the President made after the event of the election was certainly known to Mr. Adams, are considered as nullities. Officers who have been guilty of gross abuses of office, such as marshals packing juries, shall now remove as no predecessor ought to justice to have done."

TWO Nimrods while on a hunting expedition the other day espied a mink and one of them shot him but his gun discovered that the shot had not been fired. They had a big battle of horseplay with them, however, and after a pause that was sickening to both the other huntsmen exclaimed: "Wait a minute; I'll fix it." And then the two men from this poach and pointed their guns at the mink. Immediately an icicle formed and the hunter aimed and pulled the trigger. It was the last of that mink. The icicle went clear through him.

A NEW York firm applied to Abraham Lincoln some years before he became President as to the financial condition of one of his neighbors, Mr. Lincoln replied as follows: "Yours of the 10th inst. received. I am not well acquainted with Mr. — and I can't say in what circumstances. First of all, he has a wife and baby; together they ought to be worth $5,000 to any man. Secondly, he has an office in which there is a table worth $1.50 and three chairs worth say $1. Let me add, that in one corner a large rat-hole which will bring him into. Respectfully yours, A. Lincoln."

The Sunflower in the Arctic Circle, by the Internor with Lieutenant Greeley, is the title of a portion of the Arctic circle, said the Lieutenant, "is a creeping willow. When it is very large and luxuriant it is two feet long and the stem is as big around as my thumb. Oscar Wilde would find his dear and esthetic eye, the flower, the sunflower, in a snubbed condition, only a few inches high and shorn of much of its glory, the rayed disk dwindle and the number of petals diminished, until he would hardly recognize it. The dandelion, and the buttercup are also to be found."

THURLOW WEED'S STORY.

How a Lawyer Came to His Defense—The Secret Out.

(From New York World.)

The late Thurlow Weed, who was sometimes called "The Prince of Lawyers," was once told me of so many news papers he wrote to me of an interesting incident of his life which has been inadvertently omitted from his memoirs. It was during the summer of 1816 when he was living in Cooperstown, N. Y., that he met a young fledged novelist, and was setting type as a journeyman printer. "I was 19 years old and I fell in love with Catherine Ostrander, my landlady's daughter, two years younger than myself. Her father was poor, so poor, to her marrying a striling printer, without money or anything else, and I agreed to wait."

"About this time I got into a bad scrape, with a number of young fellows, who were rather a hard lot, were arrested on complaint of four girls whom we met at a prayer-meeting. I had never seen them before, but I walked home with them, and they all got into a row with a policeman, who was with us all. The others got bail, but I had no rich relatives, and prepared to go to jail. At the examination I told the justice that I had no lawyer and no money to pay out when I was brought up, and the justice said to the boy whom I had never seen before, 'If you know not, stepped forward and gave bail for me to offend and for me to be tried.'

It was Ambrose L. Jordan, I was delighted to learn, who was the lawyer. And at once the girls voluntarily declared that I was not a man to the offer the execution. I left town for awhile, but came back in a year or two and Catherine Ostrander accepted me and we were married. I never forgot this."

"Some fifteen years after, that when I was in Albany in a position of some influence, we were making up the Whig slate ticket in the city, and I was asked to be on the ticket of the town whom I had never seen before, and who was the leader of the expedition. Wesley Bellville went into a room, where Racy was, and followed, came near killing Racy with a knife. They are brother-in-laws. No trace is to be found of him."

Gen. Wolday has issued a complimentary address to the black troops who remained faithful to Gen. Gordon. He assures them he will fulfil Gordon's promise to them.

"We're in some sort of a fix," he said to me. "I have some conscientious scruples about accepting this office. You give it to me because I defended you in Cooperstown when you wanted a friend, and I did not follow in nomination, when somebody said, 'Now for attorney general.' We must have a man down in the middle of the stats!"

"I named Ambrose L. Jordan, and he was made our attorney general, and at once the girls voluntarily declared that I was not a man to the offer the execution. I left town for awhile, but came back in a year or two and Catherine Ostrander accepted me and we were married. I never forgot this."

"Well, as I understand, I am not entitled to the credit you give me for either sagacity or right feeling. I gave bail for you and deposed you became Catherine Ostrander's husband. I am a fool, but I don't want to give more money, till I get it in better support your wife attorney general."

"It was the first I knew of her agency in the matter. She had never told me during all those happy married years."

The Highest Known.

(From New England.)

Some of the sandalwood trees grow to a height of 500 feet and could cast a shadow on the summit of the pyramids or the dome of St. Peter's. They were first discovered and classified by M. Labillardiere, a French botanist, in the year 1805. They are of the second century and have grown in size to the width as wide as that of the giant cedar of California, some of which stood when they now stand before the Hebrew Bible was written. The tree is 100 feet high, and 100 feet in diameter. Some buildings were destroyed. No reports of loss of life have been received.

The Swiss police have seized and papered the plant of the Anarchists paper, and a number of persons have been arrested, and among them several hundred leaders, and by counting the number rings upon a certain one of its corsairs, it was ascertained that it was more than 4,000 years old, standing on its rocky perch unmarred by the dangers of Duncan and Huns, and ushers amid all the commotions of the globe.

Even this majestic attitude is surprised by some of the encyclopedias, which thus far are the most recent, and the most reliable, as well as the most recent testimony as to their longevity.

It is, however, manifestly great, and some of those which are to be planted here and there by our compatriots may outlast the empire of the tree of life.
